

Loopy occasional table

Friends of Wilson

Loopy is an occasional table that brings style and functionality to residential and commercial spaces.

Equally at home in living rooms, hallways and bedrooms, Loopy's versatile design also adds flair to receptions, office spaces and meeting rooms; naturally complementing any contemporary interior.

Loopy's sculptured, organic silhouette arrives in low gloss chalk white lacquer and is finished with steel legs.

Loopy's longevity is a testimony to its versatility and timeless appeal, signs of a true design classic.

FoW founder Lynne Wilson designed the Loopy table in 1996 during her final year at Edinburgh College of Art. Some four years later, British broadsheet, The Times, called it an "antique of the future," in their New Year's Day 2001 article.

It seems they were right. Loopy has been in continuous production since, during which time it's details have been documented in the V&A, it's been sold in Harrods and The Conran Shop and remains coveted by design lovers around the world.

A British design icon celebrating its 25th anniversary
